

DIG THE FALLS

Robert H. Treman State Park - Ithaca

One could say this is Watkins Glen's Doppelganger! But they would be weird...

In all honesty, the first time I visited Robert H. Treman State Park, I thought of Watkins Glen State Park a lot!

Starting from the lower lot, the hike is a bit steep, but most can easily get to the gorge trail with a little effort put forth. There are a couple of trails to get you started and most start at or near the bottom pool and Lower Falls. You start your climb up through the glen and past several other cascades and smaller waterfalls, eventually passing Devils Kitchen and Lucifer Falls. The falls seem to just appear out of nowhere and fall way further than expected!

In the case of Lucifer Falls, I would say Robert H Treman has Watkins Glen beat (this is just my opinion... or is it?).

Parking in the lower or upper lots is easy and there is a small fee for the park. Well worth the cost and the little bit of hiking needed to visit these falls! While there, make sure not to forget about Enfield Falls, which is behind the building at the upper parking area.
